Being and feeling in the spaces of museum and academy

Divya P. Tolia-Kelly is Professor of Geography & Heritage Studies at the University of Sussex. Her research is focussed on postcolonial and anti-racist approaches to cultural geographies, migration, landscape, memory, heritage, visual culture and material culture using participatory methodologies. Prof. Tolia-Kelly has a keen commitment to praxis and thus is committed to extending her research on 'race' to the everyday environment of higher education: working towards a truly universally inclusive place to work, research and write.

Organised by prof. Annaclaudia Martini and prof. Martina Tazzioli - Memory Lab for the Seminar Series
